

HAG participates in the 2017 Aberdeen Art Walk

The Harbor Art Guild booth shares the corner of Wishkah and Broadway with Moore's. Barb Shillinger demonstrates alcohol ink art as Jenny Fisher looks on.

Barb contacts LaMont and shows her set up for alcohol ink art.

As a local artist, one of my favorite gatherings on the harbor is the Aberdeen Art Walk. The Harbor Art Guild (HAG) always has a booth and I usually volunteer to be there at the booth all day.

The weather was perfect July 22. The guild usually manages to be sitting in the sun in the a.m. and shaded by the p.m. There is always some tasty food to sup on and live music a block away; the musicians perform on a flatbed truck in front of The Kelp Forest mural. The talented performers make the mural look important somehow, sort of hip.

There are always plenty of HAG people there so I can slip away for my favorite part of the event, artist shopping. I love to cruise the booths and strike up conversations with the many and varied artisans at the event. I like to listen to their stories about themselves and their art. Some people are just hawking their wares, but mostly the vendors love what they have on display and are happy to talk about their journey to the world of becoming an artist.

Many thanks to the city of Aberdeen and the organizers of the art walk and thousands of like minded folks who think it is important to celebrate the diversity of talent in our communities.
